

MARCH 2012

March 13, 1991 was a day for the history books in Norco as a new chapter was written titled "Norco College." After more than eight years of perseverance, Norco College held its grand opening celebration to welcome students and the community. Dave Waxman, then dean of Student Success was quoted in the Independent as saying "It is exciting. It's always fun to be in on the beginning of something, and especially so for the beginning of a new college like this. I think this will be a facility the whole community can take pride in."

The event featured the city of Norco's Mounted Posse as color guard, campus tours, speeches, cake, and a ribbon cutting ceremony.

Last minute tasks by the facilities staff were completed in time to show off the college's 20 classrooms, library, student services, the Corral, and Little Theatre that would accommodate 3,000 students.
